

Boulter Consulting

Urban and Transport Planning

I Can Help.

I'm qualified.

- urban and regional planning degree
- full member of the New Zealand Planning Institute
- chartered member of the Chartered Institute of Logistics and Transport
- over 30 years' professional experience in Britain and New Zealand (migrating 1995)

I've worked on . . . .

- local authority statutory plans (Resource Management Act)
- central government strategies, advice and guidelines
- local authority transport strategies (integrated, walking, cycling)
- area-wide social/ economic/ land use/ transport studies
- development approval processes
- urban design and heritage enhancement assessments

Keep it Simple.

- Life has enough problems without planners further complicating it with big visions detached from reality.
- As planners we should apply the ultimate test to our work: do people want to live in the places we create?
- That means keeping our feet on the ground, and keeping in touch with the communities we claim to be serving - even while drawing on the best planning theory around, and on the insights of other professionals.

My business is small, to keep it personal. For larger projects, I customise a team from my wide range of specialist contacts. In the past I have employed community development workers, public transport specialists, traffic engineers, traffic modelling analysts, and surveyors.